COUNTY'S CREDIT SHOWN IN SALE.

Bonds That Brought 107 Few Weeks Ago Drop to 103.

LOCAL PARTIES BID.

Fiscal Court Finally Gets a Purchaser for the Turnpike Bonds.

The Fiscal Court met Tuesday and made a private sale of the issue of $100,000 turnpike bonds, five-thirties, to W. F. Garnett & Co. Their bid was 103, the bonds to be issued in blocks as the work progresses, or 102 for $50,000 and an option on the other $50,000 at the same price. The first bid was accepted.

Oscar Morehead, representing Seasongood & Meyer, Cincinnati, offered a straight premium of 103 1/2 for the entire issue delivered at once, or 102 1/2 for $50,000 and an option on the rest. The court in executive session decided the Garnett & Co., bid, by reason of the terms of issue, was the better and closed the trade. The first sale was nearly 108, the second 107, bidders finally failing to comply. Thoughtful men are hunting for the reason why the bonds were finally almost a drag on the market at so low a price.

DATES FIXED FOR CARNIVAL.

The Eagle Lodge Closes Trade For Week of Sept. 23rd.

HELD IN AN INCLOSURE.

Council Will Be Asked To Give Formal Permit Aug. 16th.

The order of Eagles announces that it has closed a contract with the Robinson Carnival Co. for a carnival and street fair Sept. 23 to 28. The carnival will be inside of an enclosure, subject to the usual rigid regulations. The Council gave a permit for a carnival in May, but the Eagles asked to be allowed to postpone it until fall. The matter will be acted upon August 16th, by the Council. The Robinson Company is one of the best.

CONSUMPTION

Caused Death of Mrs. Andrew Jones.

Mrs. Andrew Jones died at the home on the Kirkmansville road, last Tuesday, at the age of 37 years, of consumption. She is survived by her husband and five children. Burial took place at 3 o'clock Wednesday in the family burying ground, ten miles from the city.

MORE DYNAMITE IN TENNESSEE.

Thresher of L. L. Ramsey, An Association Man, Blown Up.

REASON NOT KNOWN.

Had Been Threshing Wheat Crop of John Wilson.

The destruction of L. L. Ramsey's thresher, three miles below Edgerton, is thus reported by the Leaf-Chronicle:

"Monday night the thresher of Luther Ramsey was blown to pieces on the farm of Capt. R. A. Wilson, near Ringgold. Mr. Ramsey pulled his machine into this farm last Friday and threshed about eighty bushels of wheat, but the rain Saturday prevented further work. He expected to finish today. Last night about midnight an explosion was heard, followed by the yelling of men and firing of pistols.

The boiler seemed to have had the dynamite placed in the front end and so strong was the force that the opposite end was blown out and one or two holes in the sides. Of course there is no clue as to who perpetrated the deed or why it was done.

Mr. John Wilson controls the farm and crop and about ten days ago Mr. Ramsey went to him and asked him to sign the pledge, which he did, putting the entire crop on the farm in the Association. So why it was done he cannot tell, as Mr. Ramsey is a member and only Monday had agreed to thresh the crop of E. E. Wimpey.

Mr. Wilson is no loser financially himself, but greatly deplures that Mr. Ramsey should lose his machine while at his home. Mr. Ramsey as assistant Chairman of that district felt sure that Mr. Wilson would be a true member and regrets such an occurrence."

Mr. Ramsey finished threshing Dr. J. A. B. Word's crop after John Fields' thresher was dynamited. Dr. Word having joined the association. About twenty men were in the destroying party.

"Had dyspepsia or indigestion for years. No appetite, and what I did eat distressed me terribly. Burdock Blood Bitters cured me."—J. H. Walker, Sanbury, Ohio.

FAITHFUL DOG GUARDED BODY.

Pathetic Story Told by the Neighbors Who First Reached Ashbrook.

DUNNING'S TRIAL HELD.

Decision Will be Announced by Judge Breathitt Today.

The trial of Jas. I. Dunning for killing D. E. Alsbrook, near Crofton, July 31, was held yesterday.

Dunning and his two boys told in effect that Alsbrook got over the fence and attacked Dunning with a briar-hook after having threatened him that morning when he went by.

The boys claimed that their father was riding one mule and they the other and that Dunning shot Alsbrook without getting off his mule. They claimed the gun was carried along to shoot squirrels. They said they rode on home, a short distance, not waiting to see the effect of the gunshot wound.

J. R. Fuller and J. B. O'Neal, who were working in a field, near by, cut off from view by a corn field said they heard the shot and saw the boys running their mules, one on each mule, from the scene and Dunning himself running across a field towards his house, gun in hand. They heard screams and ran to where Alsbrook lay dead. His wife and daughter were with the corpse and his bull dog, a fierce animal, kept them at bay when they approached the body.

The hook was 8 or 10 steps from the body and Alsbrook's bucket was hanging on the fence in the road.

He had been cutting briars outside of his fence, and not in the field as stated by the Dunnings. The widow also testified that she was at the house in full view when the men met. The boys were riding and Dunning walking and that she saw her husband make no attack on him.

Dunning stopped, raised his gun and fired. As her husband fell she started to run towards him and the Dunnings all ran, the boys on the mules and the father on foot. Her husband was dead when she reached him.

The court held him over to the grand jury, continuing the bond of $500.

mands, Professor Commons says that it is not the true remedy, though "it goes without proof that such a remedy is needed, for municipal employees sooner or later cast their votes for candidates who promise or have secured a betterment of their condition and thereby have a direct effect on the enterprise as a whole."

A Menace to Unionism.

Professor Commons considers that trades unions will check this tendency, but such has not proved to be the case in England, and Mr. Sullivan, who evidently is not a trades unionist, thinks that it is more probable that the

I hereby announce myself a candidate for councilman to represent the 2d ward. Election November 5th, 1907. G. H. CHAMPLIN.

THE WEATHER

THURSDAY—Unsettled, with probable showers.

W. J. Oliver, of Knoxville, has submitted the lowest bid to furnish 500 steel cars and 100 wooden cars for work on the Panama Canal. He has not yet been awarded the contract.

Two girls, each aged eight years, and one aged nine, one aged fifteen, a woman aged twenty-two and one aged twenty-four have been assaulted, murdered and their bodies horribly mutilated, in New York in the last few days and still nobody has been lynched.

Rockefeller's attorneys say the fine of $20,240,000 will never be paid, as it is imposed on the Indiana Company, which is capitalized at only $1,000,000. That the main company is in no way responsible for the Indiana Company's obligation, is their claim.

Zion City, Ill., once the home of the world-wide creed, is no more. With the sale of the lace factories to a Chicago merchant, an ignoble end comes to the Christian Catholic church in Zion. Voliva, with a handful of followers, will migrate to Nevada, and on the reclaimed desert will attempt to propagate the faith based partly on the teachings of Dowie, and partly on his own belief.

GRACEY MINING CO.

Met Tuesday and Re-elected Old Directors.

The Gracey Mining Co. held a meeting Tuesday for the election of officers. All of the old directors were re-elected and three new men from the Pennsylvania capitalists, who have become interested in the company, were added. The company has mined a good deal of fluor spar and lead ore and prospects continue to grow better all the time.

$100 Reward, $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address: F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O.

Sold by druggists, 75c.

BETHEL ASSOCIATION

In Session at Elkton this Week.

The annual meeting of Bethel Baptist Association began at Elkton Tuesday.

The Hopkinsville church is represented by Rev. M. A. Jenkins, H. H. Abernathy, R. C. Hardwick, M. T. C. Underwood and Miss Sallie Campbell.

Rev. W. E. Mitchell, of Pembroke, was elected moderator, and Claude Bradshaw, clerk.

The resignation of J. H. Anderson as trustee of Bethel Female College was received and Chas. M. Meacham was elected to the place.

Rising From the Grave.

A prominent manufacturer, Wm. A. Fertilizer, of Lucuma, N. Y., relates a most remarkable experience. He says: "After taking less than three bottles of Electric Bitters, I feel like one rising from the grave. My trouble is Bright's disease, in the Diabetes stage. I fully believe Electric Bitters will cure me permanently, for it has already stopped the liver and bladder complications which have troubled me for years." Guaranteed at R. C. Hardwick's druggist, Price 50c.

TELEPHONE CO.

Moves Its Headquarters From Hopkinsville to Louisville.

Gol. A. G. Sharpe, of Atlanta, Ga., and J. W. Hunter, Jr., of Nashville, representing the stockholders of the Cumberland Telephone & Telegraph company, met here Tuesday morning and ordered that the legal headquarters of the company be changed from Hopkinsville to Louisville. No reason is assigned for this change.

The capital stock of the company was increased to $20,000,000 this being an increase of $200,000 which was made merely to agree with the actual issue of stock.

The board of directors will meet in Nashville on today for the purpose of ratifying the action taken here and if possible, making other changes.

TWO OLD STICKS

Of Dynamite Found In a Car Cause Talk.

A man having the appearance of a hobo gave two sticks of dynamite to a workman at the Climax Mills Tuesday morning, saying he had found it back of the American Snuff Co.'s factory, just across the street. It was given to Manager Hancock who made an investigation and found that the dynamite was taken from a box in a car on the Belt Line, where it had evidently been abandoned. One more stick was found in the box. It was of a very inferior grade, had no caps and was old and weather beaten. The incident was made the basis of a silly rumor that the factory had been threatened.

Constipation causes headache, nausea, dizziness, languor, heart palpitation. Drastic physics gripe, sicken, weaken the bowels and don't cure. Doan's Regulants act gently and cure constipation. 25 cents. Ask your druggist.

$350 FOR LEWIS.

Reward Is Offered For Capture Of Gracey Murderer.

Duke Lewis, the negro who assassinated M. M. Martin at Gracey Saturday night, is believed to have made his way to St. Louis where he recently lived. He was supposed to be at Earlington Sunday, probably headed towards St. Louis.

Marshal Warder was in sight of the men when Lewis opened fire on his deputy, entirely without warning. He ran towards them when he saw the flash and he and Lewis had a duel in the darkness. Lewis shot twice at Warder and the officer emptied his pistol as Lewis fled in the darkness. As Lewis still had two shots in his pistol, unless two barrels were empty when he began, he believes one of his shots struck the negro, though not hindering him from making his escape.

Lewis is a big brown negro, weighing about 175 to 190 pounds, smooth face, sleepy looking eyes and has double jointed wrist, wore dark clothes and a felt hat. The statement that he is married was erroneous. He is single and has not been at Gracey much for a year or two.

A reward of $200 has been offered by the Governor for his capture and the citizens of Gracey have added $150 to it.

Jas. Lucas, father-in-law of Martin, who lately moved to this city, has authorized the statement that he will also give $50 for Lewis' capture. Mr. Lucas says Lewis was recently ordered out of the postoffice at Gracey by Martin for cursing in the presence of ladies, and that he held a grudge against Martin. He takes no stock in the theory that Lewis thought he was somebody else.

Hunting for Trouble.

"I've lived in California 20 years, and am still hunting for trouble in the way of burns, sores, round holes cuts, sprains, or a case of piles that Bucklen's Arnica Salve won't cure," writes Charles Walters, of Alleghany, Sierra Co. No use hunting, Mr. Walters: it cures every case. Guaranteed by R. C. Hardwick's drug store, 25c.

Will Preach Sunday.

Dr. A. P. Lyon and family returned to the city Tuesday night. He will preach at the Methodist church Sunday morning and make further announcements. He has as yet only consumed two weeks of the four granted him for a vacation by the official board of his church.

MORNING FIRE

Home of George Vaughan Burned Down.

Wednesday morning about 2 o'clock the house of George Vaughan, colored, was discovered to be on fire and soon burned to the ground. The alarm was turned in too late and all efforts to save the building were futile. The family was aroused and made their escape, but most of the furniture was destroyed.

The fire was evidently the work of incendiaries, as a lot of old clothing had been placed against the house and saturated with coal oil. The police have reasons to believe that two young negroes about grown, were the guilty parties. They ran past police headquarters just before the alarm was given and the officers on duty gave chase. The negroes outran them and the officers have no idea who they were.

AFTER LONG ILLNESS

W. H. Reeder Passes Away In 61st Year.

Not unexpected was the death of Mr. W. H. Reeder, which occurred early Monday night. For nearly three months he had been quite feeble from drowsy and for a year he had sought relief from his malady at different health resorts.

He died in the 61st year of his age and leaves his wife and four grown children—Edward, James, William and Miss Mattie. He is also survived by his brothers, G. G., A. J. and R. D. Reeder.

Mr. Reeder was for many years a member of the Concord Baptist church. Burial took place Tuesday afternoon in Riverside cemetery.

"I was literally coughing myself to death, and had become too weak to leave my bed; and neighbors predicted that I would never leave it alive; but they got fooled, for thanks be to God, I was induced to try Dr. King's New Discovery. It took just four one dollar bottles to completely cure the cough and restore me to good sound health," writes Mrs. Eva Unepcher, of Grovetown, Stark Co., Ind. This King of cough and cold cures, and healer of throat and lungs, is guaranteed by R. C. HARDWICK Druggist, 50c, and $1.00 Trial bottle free.

TABERNACLE

Attractions for Coming Season to Be Better Than Ever.

Nothing definite has yet been decided upon, but the indications are that the board of managers, through Mr. McPherson will put on a list of better attractions for the coming season than has ever before been given. The merits of several attractions are being considered and before long a complete list will be selected.

The board of managers selected for the coming year, with the aim in view of not creating any debt whatever, recognizes the need of more comfortable seats and the removal of all the columns from the auditorium, will endeavor to realize enough from the lecture course to make the changes possible. They ask the encouragement of our people in their undertaking. But create no debts will be the slogan.

A GIRL'S LETTER.

Miss Rose Hurst, 733 Harris Street, Appleton, Wis., Writes Something of Interest to All Women.

Read What She Says:

"I WANT to say a word for Peruna for systemic catarrh and trust others who read this may try it and receive the same good from it that I did. I had been ailing for a long time and nothing seemed to do me any good, although I tried many doctors and many medicines. I had become so bad that there was no pleasure in living. I was finally asked by a friend to try Peruna, which I did, with many misgivings. What was my delight, after taking the first bottle, to see a great change for the better and I kept on improving until completely recovered. I now feel like a new woman. It has done wonders for me and I gladly recommend it to others."—Rose Hurst. "No ailing woman can fail to be interested in the above testimonial. Miss Hurst was persuaded by a friend to try Peruna, and she is now perfectly well and feels like another woman. Such is the story in brief."

CHAPTER XXI.

"She Loves Me, She Loves Me Not." It was no claim of military duty which compelled Brant to relinquish Miss Spencer so promptly at the hotel door, but rather a desire to escape her ceaseless chatter and gain retirement where he could reflect in quiet on the revelation of Hampton. In this quest he rode slowly up the valley of the Bear Water, through the bright sunshine, the rare beauty of the scene scarcely leaving the slightest impress on his mind, so busy was it, and so preoccupied. He no longer had any doubt that Hampton had utilized his advantageous position, as well as his remarkable powers of pleading, to ensnare the susceptible heart of this young, confiding girl. While the man had advanced no direct claim, he had said enough to make it perfectly clear the close intimacy of their relation and the existence of a definite understanding between them. With this recognized as a fact, was he justified in endeavoring to win Naida Gill for himself? That the girl would find continued happiness with such a man as Hampton he did not for a moment believe possible. That she had been deliberately deceived regarding his true character he felt no doubt. That the girl was morally so far above him as to make his very presence a profanation, and at the unbidden thought of it, the soldier vowed to oppose such an unholy consummation. Nor did he, even then, utterly despair of winning, for he recalled afresh the continuity of their few past meetings, his face brightened in memory of this and that brief word or shy glance.

All the world loves a lover, and all the fairies guide him. As the officer's eyes glanced upon the dusty road, he perceived just ahead the same steep bank down which he had plunged in his effort at capturing his fleeing tormentor. With the sight there came upon him the desire to linger again in the little glen where they had first met, and dream of the day when he would be able to win the heart of her who had given to the shaded nook both life and beauty. Heaving himself from the saddle, tied a loose rein to a scrub oak, and clambered up the bank.

With the noiseless step of a plainsman he pushed in through the labyrinth of bush, only to halt petrified upon the very edge of that inner barrier. No figment of imagination, but the glowing reality of flesh and blood, awaited him. She had neither seen nor heard his approach, and he stood in perplexity. He had framed a dozen speeches for her ears, yet now he could do no more than stand and gaze, his heart in his eyes. And it was a vision to behold that face, so lipspeechless. She was seated with unstudied grace on the edge of the bank, her hands clasped about one knee, her sweet face beamed by thought her eyes downcast, the long lashes plainly outlined against the clear cheeks. To draw back unobserved was impossible, even had he possessed strength of will sufficient to make the attempt, nor would words of easy greeting come to his relief. He could only sit in worship silently as before a sacred shrine. It was thus she glanced up and saw him with startled eyes, her hands unclasping, her cheeks rose-colored.

"Lieut. Brant, you here?" she exclaimed, speaking as if his presence seemed unreal. "What strange miracle an idle thought can work!"

"Thoughts, I have heard," he replied, coming toward her with head uncovered, "will sometimes awaken answers through vast distances of time and space. As my thought was with you I may be altogether to blame for thus arousing your own. From the expression of your face, I supposed you dreamed of me."

She smiled, her eyes uplifted for a single instant to his own. "It was rather strange just merging into dream, and then waking to find me here. I know not whether it is the common gift of all minds, but my day-dreams are almost more to me than my realities."

"First is words, and now dreams," she stated himself comfortably at her feet. "You would encourage me to believe you a most impractical person, Miss Naida."

"If that were only true, I am sure I should be most happy, for it has been my fortune so far to conjure up only pleasure through day-dreaming—the things I like and long for become my very own then. But if you mean, as I suspect, that I do not enjoy the dirt and drudgery of life, then my plea will have to be genuine. Back of what you term practical some one has said there is always a dream, a first conception. In that sense I choose to be a dreamer."

"And not so wise a choice, if your dreams only tell toward results." He sat looking into her animated face, deeply puzzled by both words and action. He was very much noticing that you avoid all reference to my meeting with Mr. Hampton. Is this another sign of your impractical mind?"

"I should say rather the opposite, for I had not even supposed it concerned me."

"Indeed! That presents a vastly different view from the one of an hour since. The distinct impression was then conveyed to both our minds that you were greatly distressed regarding the matter, and it is possible you can have been acting as such."

"Certainly not," and she made no attempt to hide her indignation. "Do you mean?"

"He hesitated a moment in his reply, feeling that possibly he was treading upon thin ice. But her eyes commanded a direct answer, and he yielded to their gaze."

"We were informed that you experienced great anxiety for fear we might quarrel—so great, indeed, that he had confided your troubles to another."

"To whom?"

"Miss Spencer. She came to us ostensibly in your name, and as a peace-maker."

For a moment she sat gazing directly at him, then she laughed softly. "Why, how supremely ridiculous! You call her a peace-maker, and she tells me you certainly are in play. Lieut. Brant, I have never even dreamed of such a thing. You had informed me that your mission was one of peace, and she pledges my word not to permit any quarrel. I had the utmost confidence in you both."

"How, then, did she even know of our meeting?"

"I am entirely in the dark, as mystified as you," she acknowledged, "and I feel it has certainly never been a habit with me to betray the confidence of my friends, and I learned long since not to confide secrets to Miss Spencer."

"Apparently neither cared to discuss the problem longer, yet he remained silent considering those questions which might decide his fate."

"You speak of trust to confidence in me, but I speak slowly. To me the greatest trust you repose in Mr. Hampton is scarcely comprehensible. Do you truly believe in his reform?"

"Certainly. Don't you?"

"The direct return question served to nettles and confuse him. 'It is, perhaps, not my place to say, as my friends are happily deceived in their opinion on the permanence of his reformation. But if his word can be depended upon, your happiness to a very large extent depends.'"

"You are very insistent; yet I know of no good reason why I should not answer. Without at all knowing the nature of those claims to which you refer, I have no hesitancy in saying that I possess such complete confidence in Bob Hampton as to reply unreservedly yes. But really, Lieut. Brant, I am unable to give you some other topic. It is evident that you two gentlemen are not friendly, yet there is no reason why any misunderstanding between you should interfere with our friendship, is there?"

She asked this question with such perfect innocence that Brant believed she failed to comprehend Hampton's claims to the name of reformer.

"I have been informed that it must," he explained. "I have been told that I was no longer to force my attentions upon Miss Spencer."

"Yes, those were, I believe, his exact words. Can you wonder that I hardly know how I stand in your sight?"

"I do not at all understand," she laughed. "Truly, Lieut. Brant, I do not. I feel that Mr. Hampton would not say that without a good and sufficient reason. He is not a man to be awayed by prejudice; yet, whatever the reason may be, I know nothing about it."

"But you do not answer my last query."

"Perhaps I did not hear it."

"It was: How do I stand in your sight? That is of far more importance to me now than any unauthorized command from Mr. Hampton."

She glanced upon his serious face shyly, with a little dimple of returning anger. "Indeed, but perhaps he might not care to have me say. However, as I once informed you that you were very far from being my ideal, possibly it may be my duty to qualify that harsh statement somewhat."

"By confessing that I am your ideal?"

"Oh, indeed, no! We never realize our ideals, you know, or else they would entirely cease to be ideals. My confession is limited to a mere admission that I now consider you a very pleasant young gentleman."

"You offer me a stone when I cry unto you for bread," he exclaimed. "The world is filled with pleasant young men. They are a drug on the market."

"I have been told that I was no longer to force My Attentions Upon Miss Gillis."

"I beg some special distinction, some different classification in your eyes."

"You are becoming quite hard to please," her face turned partially away, her look meditative, "and—distant, but I will try. You are intelligent, a splendid dancer, fairly good looking, rather bright at times, and, no doubt, would prove venturesome if not held strictly to your proper place. Take it all in all, you are even interesting, and—I admit—I am inclined to like you."

"The taunting tone and manner served him well. He grasped the girl's hand resting invitingly on the grass, and held it firmly within his own. 'You only make sport as you did once before. I must have the whole truth.'"

"Oh, no; to make sport at such a time would be sheerest mockery, and I will not do that to you."

"Why, remember, we are scarcely more than strangers. How rude you are! only our third time of meeting, and you will not release my hand."

"Not unless I must, Naida," and the deep throbbing soborness of his voice startled the girl into suddenly upflitting her eyes to his face. What she read there instantly changed her mood from playfulness to earnest gravity.

"Oh, please do not—do not say what you are tempted to; her voice almost choking, I cannot listen. Truly I cannot; I must not. It would make us both very unhappy, and you would be sure to regret such hasty words."

"Regret!" and he yet clung to the hand which she scarcely endeavored to release, bending forward hoping to read in her hidden eyes the secret her lips guarded. "Am I, then, not old enough to know my own mind?"

"Yes—yes; I hope so; yes; but it is not for me; it can never be for me—I am no more than a child, a homeless waif, a nobody. You forget that I am not even known who I am, and the name I ought rightfully to bear. I will not have it so."

"Naida, sweetheart," and he burst impulsively through all bonds of restraint, her flushed cheeks the inspiration of his daring. "I will speak for I care nothing for all this. It is for me, Naida, forever. Do you understand me, darling? I love you! I love you!"

"For an instant—once glad, weak, foolish, a forgetful instant—she did not see him, but only her own self; the very world was lost. Then she awoke as if from a dream, his strong arms clasped about her, his lips upon her forehead. 'I love you! I love you!'"

"You must not," she sobbed. "I tell you not! I will not consent; I have not been false to myself. You have not given you no right!"

He permitted her to draw away, and she stood facing each other, he eager, mystified, thrilling with passion almost beyond measure, she trembling with unstrung fear, her cheeks crimson, her eyes filled with mute appeal.

"I read it in your face," he insisted. "It told of love."

"Then my face must have lied," she answered, her soft voice tremulous, "or else you read the message wrongly. It is from my lips you must take the answer."

"And they kissed me."

"If so, I knew it not. It was by no volition of mine. Lieut. Brant, I have never loved you so completely; that was not right."

"My heart exonerates me."

"I cannot accept that guidance."

"Then you do not love me?"

"He crushed back an oath. 'Like him or not like him, I will save him if he be the power of man. Now will you go?'"

"Yes," she answered, and suddenly extended her arms. "Kiss me first."

"With the magical pressure of her lips upon his, he swung into the saddle and spurred down the road. It was a principle of his military training never to temporize with a man who would strike him back, but he must have sufficient force behind him. He reined up before the seemingly deserted camp, his horse flung back upon its haunches, white foam flecking its quivering flanks.

"Sergeant!" The sharp snap of his voice brought that officer forward on the run. "Where are the men?"

"Playing ball, most of 'em, sir, just beyond the ridge."

"Are the horses out in the herd?"

"Yes, sir."

"So! The camp; arm and mount every man; bring them into Glencald on the gallop. Do you know the old Shasta mine?"

"Half-way up the hill back of the hotel. You'll find me somewhere in front of it. This is a matter of life or death, so jump lively now!"

He drove in his spurs, and was off like the wind. A number of men were in the street, all hurrying forward in the same direction, but he dashed past them. These were miners mostly, eager to have a hand in the man-hunt. Here and there a rider skurried along and joined in the chase. Just beyond the hotel, half-way up the hill, rides were speaking irregularly, the white puffs of smoke blown quickly away by the stiff breeze. Near the center of this line of skirmishers a denser cloud was beginning to rise in spirals.

Brant, perceiving the largest group of men gathered just before him, rode straight toward them. The crowd started slightly at his approach, but he went on as he did, his horse with taut rein. He looked down into rough, bearded faces. Clearly enough these men were in no fit spirit for peace making.

"You damn fools!" he roared, once, hoarsely, his gun poised as if in threat, "what do you mean by riding us down like that? Do you own this country?"

Brant flung himself from the saddle and strode in front of the fellow. "I mean business. You see this uniform? Strike that, my man, and you strike the United States. Who is leading this outfit?"

"I don't know as it's your affair," the man returned, sullenly. "We ain't taking no army orders at present, mister. We're free-born American citizens, as ye better let us alone."

"That is not what I asked you," and Brant squared his shoulders, his hands clinched. "My question was, Who is at the head of this outfit? and I want an answer."

The spokesman looked around upon the others near him with a grin of derision. "Oh, ye do, hey? Well, I reckon on we, as if you must know. Since Big Jim Larson got in the shoulder that outfit right here has bin doin' most of the brain work. So if ye got anythin' ter say, mister officer, I reckon ye better spit it out now, or I'm arter relieve yer mind."

"Who are you?"

The fellow expostulated vigorously into the miners under foot, and drawing out his hands to address his lips, he dashed against the unexpected in-

"Oh, tell him, Ben. What's the blarney?" He can't do ye no hurt. The man's look became dogged. "I'm Ben Colton, if it'll do ye any good to know."

"Where before?" said Brant, contemptuously, and then swept his glance about the circle. "A nice leader of vigilantes you are, a fine representative of law and order, a lovely specimen of the free-born American citizen! Men, do you happen to know what sort of a cur you are following in this affair?"

"Oh, Ben's all right."

"What ye got against him, young feller?"

"I fronted this," and Brant squarely faced the man, his voice ringing with steel. "I've seen mobs before to-day, and I've dealt with them. I'm not afraid of you or your whole outfit. I've got fighting me to back me up. I never yet saw any mob which wasn't led and incited by some cowardly, revengeful rascal. Honest men get mixed up in such affairs, but they are invariably inflamed by some low-down sneak with an ax to grind. I confess I don't know all about this Colton, but I know enough to say he is an army deserter, a liar, a dive-keeper, a gambler, and, to my certain knowledge, the direct cause of the death of three men, one a soldier of my troop. Now isn't he a sweet specimen to lead in the avenging of a supposed crime?"

"Whatever else Colton might have been, he was a man of action. Like a flash his gun flew to the level, but he was instantly knocked aside by the grizzled old miner standing next him. 'None of that, Ben,' he growled, warningly. 'I don't never pay to shoot holes in Uncle Sam.'"

Brant smiled. He was not there just then to fight, but to secure delay until his own men could arrive, and to turn aside the fierce mob spirit if such a result was found possible.

"I really would enjoy accommodating you, Colton," he said, coolly, feeling much more at ease, "but I never fight personal battles with such fellows as you. And now you woke up to the facts of this matter. A couple of hundred of you chasing after two men, one an officer of the law doing his sworn duty, and the other innocent of any crime. I should imagine you would feel proud of your job."

"Innocent? Hell!"

"That is what I said. You fellows have gone off half-cooked—a mob generally does. Both Miss Spencer and Mr. Wynkoop state positively that they saw the real murderer of Red Slavin, and it was not Bob Hampton."

The men were impressed by his evident earnestness, his unquestioned courage. Several voices spoke almost at once.

"That's right!"

"Oh, say, I saw the fellow with his hand on the knife."

"After we got the chap, well, give them people a chance to tell what they know."

Brant's keenly attentive ears heard the far-off chuck of numerous horses' feet.

"I rather think you will," he said, confidently, his voice ringing out with sudden authority.

He stepped back, lifted a silver whistle to his lips, and sounded one sharp, clear note. There was a growing thunder of hoofs, a quick, manly cheer, a crashing through the underbrush, and a squad of eager troopers, mounted on the best of the new-arriving, in anticipation of trouble, came galloping up the slope, swinging out into line as they advanced, their carbines gleaming in the sunlight. It was pretty, sharply performed, and their officer's face brightened.

"Very nicely done, Watson," he said to the expectant sergeant. "Deploy your men to left and right, and clear out those shooters. Make a good job of it, but no firing unless you have to."
